Documents FR-A-1 319 291, FR-A-2 568 730 and BE-A-571 724, cited by the applicant in the description, each describe an installation and attachment device for pipes in a variety of systems, which devices do not extend beyond the disclosure in the preamble of claim 1.

Document US-A-4 534 147 also describes an installation and attachment device for pipes in a variety of systems, which device includes a plastic profile member with a base plate (16) of which the rear surface is provided with an adhesive means (20) for attachment to a wall (12) and the front surface is provided with resiliently deformable wings (28) that define, in pairs, a longitudinal recess for receiving and retaining a long body (30).

In said document (see claim 1), the closed-C-shaped deformable wings (28) return to the starting position thereof after they have been moved apart to allow the insertion of a conductor into the recess they form. Said base plate (16) has no scored transverse lines, nor is it pre-cut into segments.

Document DE-U-20 102 174 describes an installation and attachment device for pipes in a variety of systems, which device consists of a plurality of segments (5a) arranged one after the other.

In said document, there are no open-C-shaped wings projecting from the front surface of the base plate, in accordance with the invention.

Document WO-A-9 314 545 describes an installation and attachment device for pipes in a variety of systems, including open-C-shaped deformable wings (18) that define, in pairs, a longitudinal recess (3) for receiving a long body.

Said wings (18) project from the front surface of said base plate (17), are transversely spaced apart from one another and are produced as one piece in the same semi-rigid material as said base plate.

In said document, the rear surface of said base plate (17) has no adhesive means for attachment to a wall, rather said base plate is attached to a wall by means of a screw (11). Similarly, there is no snap-on finishing profile member for covering the installation bracket and the associated pipes.

In view of the above, the subject matter of claim 1 is not anticipated by the documents cited in the search report and fulfils the requirements of novelty and inventive step (PCT Article 33(2) and 33(3)).
